

*Can you make
Lean Sigma work?
Setting the necessary
human capital foundation
for better operations*

Most businesses and sectors still enjoy significant opportunities to take advantage of best practices with people and processes to drive dramatic savings and increased capacity for revenue generation.

Matching people to work and building continuous improvement requires best practices from Human Capital and Lean Sigma to get and keep measurable improvements. HC is the foundation for achieving and sustaining meaningful results. Failure to get HC right leaves even well-functioning organizations with only a modest chance of success. This session will focus on human capital practices that are designed to drive better HR execution, and that establish the basis for enterprise success throughout the organization.

An exclusive series open only to Strategic Leadership Forum members, the Human Capital Council spotlights issues and concerns facing senior managers. The series focuses on human interaction and best practices in the workplace and gives participants an opportunity to share their experiences, insights and opinions. We suggest that you book early as space is limited to 20 participants.
